

She screamed 'Hello World' with the assertiveness of a newborn, wordlessly announcing that from that moment on she will be breathing on her own. iPhones spread her cry around the world. A midwife cocooned her in blankets and handed her back to Yeela. From what I've been told, Baby Ruth's delivery was much less traumatic than her sister's before her. What more could one ask for, except perhaps an explanation of the miracle of birth. This time around the doctor worked more like a dentist than a meat carver, there was far less blood loss, less tissue damage so Yeela walked away from the delivery room with an Apgar score of ten. Suma summed up the nonviolent delivery in eloquent terms which any man could understand. Yeela's perspective was more reserved, yet somewhat broader, conveying that all was well. It took a few minutes for the first details to come across the ocean, and another day for expert opinion allowed to hug and bite Sister Ruth while she was still warm. Ten minutes old, nameless but full of character Baby Ruth stared with sparkling eyes into an iPhone's camera which immortalized her glowing glare. Suma determined that the girls looked very similar and within minutes circulated the evidence to prove it. Indeed they were only one pound apart at the time of birth. There was one more pound to push this time around, yet still less carnage. The

At such growth rate Baby Ruth would weigh two hundred kilos by her first birthday (twice what Babe Ruth weighed when he was playing for the Yankees, but who gives a shit). It's a good thing she was born when she was, with everyone where his part of the family. Working for long hours it took a few more minutes before he caught up with all that had happened. So hard did he toil that he had lost track of time, and was not aware his uncle-ship was due to be doubled. Suma was very patient with him as was I. With almost a whole day before her flight, Imma was safely at home and Yeela could focus on delivering the baby without worrying about Imma being arrested by the TSA. So Imma was happy and Suma was happy and Osmo was happy and Tintin was so happy that he and wrote about it at greater length of exclamation marks. After two days Yeela went home where Imma was already taking care Kijkij, having bounded up the steps in spite of her knee. What more could one ask for save perhaps for a picture of all five ladies together so we know for sure that we're not making up this miracle...
